

Co-sponsored by the Department of Modern Languages & Literatures, the programs in Comparative Literature and Medieval Studies; the Latin American & Latinx Studies Institute; and the Fordham Digital Scholarship Collaborative

Digital Transhispania

Reading and writing towards other worlds

November 19

4:00pm

568 Faber Hall

A guest lecture by

Cecily Raynor

MCGILL UNIVERSITY

Professor Raynor specializes in contemporary Latin American and Brazilian literatures, as well as the Digital Humanities. Using multi-level methodologies, she explores the ways in which space, identity, and nation emerge through reading and writing practices. Within the digital realm, Raynor studies the formation of cultures and communities of readership within literary blogs and newspapers.